Schwellenländer-Anleihen im Globalen Markt Portfolio

Anleihen aus Schwellenländern sind in den globalen Anlageportfolios trotz ihrer wachsenden wirtschaftlichen Bedeutung deutlich unterrepräsentiert. Dies geht aus der jüngsten Ausgabe der wiederkehrenden Studie „Global Market Portfolio 2024“ hervor.¹ Das Globale Markt Portfolio (GMP) wird auf rund 175 Billionen Dollar geschätzt, stellt den Gesamtmarkt aller investierbaren Vermögenswerte dar und dient somit als natürlicher Maßstab für die strategische Vermögensallokation. Anleihen der Industrieländer, einschließlich Staatsanleihen und Unternehmensanleihen mit Investment-Grade-Rating machen hier den größten Teil der festverzinslichen Anlagen aus, mit über 30% Anteil am GMP. Der Anteil der Schwellenländer-Anleihen liegt bei 3,9 % – eine für uns noch unverhältnismäßig niedrige Allokation.

Etablierung von Schwellenländer-Anleihen

In den letzten zwei Jahrzehnten haben sich die Märkte für Schwellenländer-Anleihen stark gewandelt. Früher als risikoreiche
